Kathy Liu is a Sydney based painter who finds her voice in the interplay of colour, composition, and imagination. Her paintings bridge the gap between abstraction and narrative, often with “potential images” that require the viewers’ imagination to be fully activated. Her works are poetic and often in an ambiguous status between the desire for disclosure and the temptation of the void.

Liu completed a Bachelor of Fine Arts at the National Art School, Sydney in 2022 and was awarded COSO Architecture Landscape Prize. She has been a finalist in many art prizes including the National Emerging Art Prize (2023), Mosman Art Prize (2023, 2016), Gosford Art Prize (2023), Waverley Art Prize (2021, 2022), Calleen Art Prize (2018). She had her solo exhibitions at Sheffer Gallery, Sydney in 2021 and 2023, and her artworks are held in various private collections.
